Doña Ana County Historical Society

President's Comments

By: George Helfrich

We had a good turnout for the March meeting and enjoyed the New Mexico Humanities Council sponsored Chautauqua presentation by Rosalia de Aragon of La Llorona. The board is considering ways to enhance the Southern New Mexico Historical Review (SNMHR) so look for a separate article on that in this newsletter. Now is the time to be working on your own article to be submitted for consideration for next year's Review.

Included also in this issue will be an update on what is happening with the former Doña Ana County Courthouse as well as announcement of a social function in support of the Amador Museum Foundation. I had hoped to have the Volume XVI issues of the SNMHR mailed by now to all out of town members and to those local members who have not yet been able to attend a meeting. We should have them mailed in several weeks, so if you have not sent in your dues, you may still be able to make the mailing. A number of DACHS members participated in the recent National History Day competition held at the Farm and Ranch Museum on the sixth of March. I was happy to see some participation of local Las Cruces schools this year. George Hackler has two very interesting speakers lined up for the remaining spring meetings, so mark your calendars and bring a friend. ■

New Ideas Concerning the SNMHR

In an attempt to improve distribution and quality of the Review and to address ever increasing costs of producing the publication, Rick Hendricks and Martha Andrews, Co-Editors, have recommended that DACHS publish it in electronic format and make it available on the Internet. The board is interested in receiving comments from the membership regarding this new approach. One of the concerns that has been addressed is how to make it available to members that do not have a computer or would have difficulty downloading articles of interest. We have discussed making printed copies available to

A History of Fort Stanton by

Lynda A. Sánchez

Lynda is a retired educator, (K thru College level), and an active author, and historian. She has spent time in South America with the Peace Corps and done archaeological field work in Mesa Verde, Mexico, and worked on the Blue Creek Maya Research Project in Belize. She collaborated with Eve Ball on the book Indeh: An Apache Odyssey, a those members who could not otherwise receive it. This raises questions about the quality and format of printed copies and whether or not a charge should be imposed for what has been provided free to members for the last several years. It should be remembered that there was a charge for the Review for many years even though printing and mailing costs were significantly lower then. Below are some comments provided by Rick and Martha:

“As we begin planning for the 2010 issue of the Southern New Mexico Historical Review, we would like to begin to move the Review from paper to electronic format. There are a number of reasons why we think this is a good idea and why we think now is an appropriate time to initiate this change. We believe this change will Award Series - This third in a series of articles from the Banquet Program features one of the awards presented at the 2009 Banquet.

THE OLD TIMERS AWARD 2009 “Historic Green Bridge”

This award identifies a cherished object, natural phenomena, or cultural tradition prominent in Mesilla Valley heritage. Selection should be confined to that which deserves public attention and that which would otherwise escape recognition as an important part of the physical character of this region. Persons are excluded.

The Historic Green Bridge is the second oldest highway bridge in New Mexico (1902); oldest steel highway bridge and oldest Pratt truss bridge. The bridge is listed on both the state (1997) and national (2008) registers of historic places. This is a prime example of local government and resident-responsibilities for building and maintenance of roads and bridges in the Territorial Period and of later state policies to relocate and reuse older steel bridges to secondary roads, circa 1930s-1950. Used by rural agricultural interests in Chaves County (1902-1943) and the Picacho/Rio Hondo area of Lincoln County (1944-1989).

Originally part of a three-span structure over the Pecos River in 1902, it was relocated to the Rio Hondo near Picacho in 1943. The bridge was relocated to its present site at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum in Las Cruces in 2007. It was restored in accordance with consultations with the State Historic Preservation Division and strict preservation standards, including return to all-wood 4x4 deck material, historic color matching of paint, and exact duplication of replaced materials utilizing 1943 Highway Department blueprints. ■ masterpiece of oral history of the Apache people. She has published over 100 articles on Southwest history topics. Lynda's latest triumph is the successful organized effort to preserve and protect Fort Stanton. Lynda has worked tirelessly writing e-mail and letters to anyone she thought would help. Lynda says "I eventually got an e-mail from the governor's office saying 'Lynda, we hear you loud and clear—we don't need any more letters.'" ■

- Improve quality of text and images
- Offer the ability to increase the size of the text for easier reading
- Provide a much greater visibility for DACHS and enhance our outreach through the Internet
- Give greater exposure to our authors
- Follow the lead of many major newspapers and journals
- Conform to emerging standards for print media”

Meet the Newsletter Editor - Doyle Piland

Doyle was born and raised in southcentral Missouri near the small town of Ava, where he went to high school. After a couple years working as a welder in Tulsa, Oklahoma he joined the Army. Twenty Two and a half years later, he retired from the Army, having earned his BSEE degree along the way. In 1980, Doyle was hired by White Sands Missile Range and worked another Seventeen and a half years and retired with 40 years total federal service. In retirement he has kept himself busy as the volunteer Archivist for the White Sands Missile Range Museum for almost ten years. He also volunteers with the Sun Country Striders, a walking club, the WSMR Historical Foundation, and as the DACHS Newsletter Editor. ■

Old Doña Ana County Courthouse

Renovation is Underway

On the 12th of March, John Hoffman, the new owner of the courthouse, invited two Historical Society representatives to take a look at the work being done on the old Doña Ana County Courthouse. A lot has been done, but there is still lots to do. John says that all the asbestos removal has been completed, and they are currently foaming the roof over the jail part of the building. The contractors have removed all the old airconditioner units and are in the process of removing the plumbing associated with the heating system in preparation for installing a new Heating, Ventilating, and Air Conditioning (HVAC) system. He plans to offer space for offices and to use the courtroom as a multifunction event ballroom. ■

La Llorona Visits the March Meeting

At right, Rosalia de Aragon, actress and musician, has assumed the role of La Llorona – The Wailing Woman, at the Society’s March meeting. Rosalia portrayed a version of the La Llorona folk story and later discussed several variations of the story. Based upon the questions and response from the audience, everyone enjoyed her presentation. ■
